

Explore Chevron Island's new hot address

It takes a village to live like this

The Catalina is setting off excited whispers across the Gold Coast, promising its residents a sleek and modern lifestyle. Taking direct inspiration from South Beach in Miami (the one that Will Smith and Pitbull are always banging on about, not the one off the GC Highway), these Chevron Island apartments give a strong nod to art deco design. The sweeping balconies are like something out of a castle, with river or skyline views. Guys, it's... it's just a spunky-as building!

The work of Marquee Development Partners, the building is redefining island living. Think less coconuts and straw huts; more rooftop kitchen and bar, residents' cinema room, onsite gym, pool and spa. Its front door is just metres from the HOTA footbridge, making iconic GC entertainment, beaches and commercial sector all walkable. With easy access to G Link and buses, this well could be the green lifestyle change you're looking for.

If current affairs shows have taught us anything, it's that we need to panic and get on the property ladder now. Fortunately, buying at The Catalina feels anything but a knee jerk reaction. It's a legit investment in your future, your lifestyle and the 'you' you want to be. It's the kind of address that will make you say, "I don't live on the Gold Coast. I live at The Catalina!"

Find your place in this modern island village. Ready for 2021 occupancy, apartments selling now.
